Mr. Brown, the physical director is taking his 8th hour class out to the base ball park and teaching them the game of Soccer foot ball. We'd like to see some good interesting games pretty soon.

The tennis court is in fine condition and the gymnasium classes are using it during the fine weather. A plan is being made to organize classes for all students.

In October the testing week for schools in Michigan commences. Material for the test has already been received and preparations are being made. The test includes English and Latin in the high school, and spelling, reading and arithmetic in the grades. The final results will be summarized under a definite average which will be made for all and that mark will be given for each school.

Debating has been introduced into our school and a first team is being tended by seven or eight industrious students. Grayling is on the Michigan League Debating list and is the only town on the list that has not showed "figit." We are trying very hard to organize a team and the support of all students is needed. Pleasant times may be had this winter by the debating club so if you are not already a member sign up with Miss Bellows at once. An opportunity for all.

The Eighth Grade had a Weenie roast in Connies grove Monday night. A very enjoyable time was had by all.

The High School faculty was very nicely entertained by the high school girls Saturday night in the gymnasium.

Fern Hum,—"Russell, don't you want me to bother you?"

Russell Yahr,—"Not so you could notice."

Kristine Salling in Chemistry, in giving the properties of water began by saying "it's tasteless."

Miss Fuller in Chemistry: Now class, you must make your leather lab aprons real long or you'll find holes in the tops of your stockings.

Don—Miss Gniech, I can't go to orchestra practice tonight because I have got a cold sore on my lip.

Miss Gniech—I pity you for I know what that is myself.

Miss Fuller on Monday morning: Order—order back there.

Fresh Freshman: Ham and eggs, please.

Mr. Smith was in Cheboygan last Friday refereeing interscholastic foot ball.

FARMING

Very Successful.

From every point of view the Land Clearing Schools in Maple Forest and Grayling were highly successful. The weather was perfect; the work went off well, and the attendance was splendid. How the folks did turn out!

It is, indeed, refreshing to have the people turn out when we try to have a meeting for their benefit. If we could secure more of this county, but we dislike to bring them here and not have an attendance sufficient to warrant the expense to the state.

Staying at home can be overdone.

Apples—More Money From Them.

Many report apples wasting.

Let's turn that waste into money.

Packing houses make their best profit on what used to be wasted by turning bone into handles, buttons, etc.; blood, into fertilizer and other products; meat scraps into tankage; saving hair for use in plaster.

The cotton gin used to throw away the cottonseed and find them a nuisance to dispose of. Now, there is not enough cotton seed to supply the dairymen who use it as feed.

Same is true with beet pulp that used to be thrown away, and which now is a prominent dairy feed.

Try These Suggestions.

Winter apples that do not find a ready sale this fall, should be carefully hand picked without bruises, wrapped separately in paper, packed in a cold cellar, to be sold late in winter, when the glut of apples is over.

In New England it has been the practice for generations to bury apples in pits, covered with straw, then with dirt.

Some varieties, dug out of such pits in the spring will be found hard and sound as ever.

Apple Butter Without Boiled Cider.

Those who recall having, away back in New England, New York State, Indiana, Ohio or Southern Michigan, bread and butter spread thick with home-made apple butter, will say I am right, when I declare that good apple butter is wonderful.

There should be more unsalable apples worked up into apple butter here, for home use and for sale.

Put up in quart cans lots of it could be sold in Grayling during the winter.

Cut up and core apples and cook until tender. Put through colander. Add sugar to make sweet as desired. Add cloves and cinnamon if liked. Cook until thick, stirring often to prevent burning.

Fruit Butter.

Never, until two years ago, had I experienced the delights of fruit butter, a kind of cousin to apple butter, but different.

Mrs. L. B. Merrill is a master of the art of making fruit butter. She mixes two, three, four or five kinds of fruit, thus being able to secure a wide range of flavors.

Mrs. Merrill says:

"Prepare apples as for apple butter. Put through colander. Cook and sweeten to taste. Then add a can or more of other fruit, as raspberries, strawberries, or huckleberries. Sometimes two or three kinds. Boil down. Very nice."

Carrot and Apple Butter.

One pint tart apple.

One pint grated raw carrot.

Two cups sugar.

Grated rind and juice of one lemon.

Cook apple until tender. Put thru colander. Add the other ingredients. Cook until thick and clear. Seal in hot jars.

Apple Catsup.

Pare and core two quarts apples.

Cook until soft.

Put through colander.

Add two cups sugar, two teaspoons each pepper, cloves, mustard, cinnamon, salt.

Add four onions chopped fine.

Cook until thick, or about one hour.

Seal while hot in sterilized jars.

Seed Corn.

Better save a lot of it while the saving is good. Should have been saved from the standing stalk. Save twice as much as you think you will want. A good farmer will keep a year's seed corn ahead. After saving the great trick is the drying.

Two factors which will largely determine the yield of next year's corn crop, are the selection and curing this fall of seed to be planted next season.

The common practice of selecting seed corn from the crib or when husking the general crop are too costly to be continued. Such corn usually germinates poorly and may result in poor stands. It is extremely important that the most mature and highest yielding corn in this season's crop be selected and properly stored to furnish seed for planting next spring.

Advantages of Field Selecting Seed Corn.

The great advantage of selecting seed corn in the field before the crop is harvested lies in the fact that mature corn is secured and that a study of the plant on which the ear grew and of its environment can be made. In selecting from the shock or from the crib little is known of the parent.

Dry Immediately and Store Properly.

Hang by strings or wire trees, or place on racks, no ears touching.

Place in a freely ventilated, dry room where freezing will not take place.

The vitality of moist corn is sapped by molds and is injured by freezing.

Properly dried corn resists injury from freezing and molding.

Curing and Storing Seed Corn.

Good seed corn can only be secured by thoroughly drying carefully selected mature ears before being exposed to freezing weather. In late September and during October corn as it comes from the field contains from thirty to forty per cent moisture. In this condition it is easily damaged by molding and freezing in order to retain its vitality it must be rapidly dried so as to pass through the winter with a moisture content of twelve to fifteen per cent.

Immediately after harvest, corn for seed should be placed where it will receive free ventilation in order to dry rapidly. No two ears should be allowed to touch. Many excellent devices for drying and curing seed corn are in common use. The ears may be strung on binder twine and hung from a rafter. Wire trees on which the ears are impaled may be made from woven wire fences, or may be purchased. Racks may be easily constructed from two by four and laths on which the ears may be laid. These racks should be placed in the attic or a spare room in the house, tool room, etc. A well ventilated room is necessary. A cellar without furnace is as a rule a poor place to store seed corn. During the early period of drying all windows should be opened so as to remove excess moisture.

Corn properly dried will not be greatly damaged by freezing but it is best to store where it will not be exposed to extreme cold.

Where large amounts of seed are to be handled, special corn drying houses are desirable, equipped with numerous windows or panels which will give free circulation of air, and a stove to furnish artificial heat to hasten drying and prevent freezing.

This fall is the time to select Michigan grown corn for next year's crop. Corn from other states is often not well adapted to Michigan conditions. To insure a sufficient supply of good seed corn to plant Michigan's crop the coming spring, the concerted action of all Michigan corn growers in selecting and storing the best corn for seed this fall is necessary.

Some Seed Corn Facts.

By selection in field during late September and October, mature high yielding ears which will germinate can be secured.

About one corn grower in one hundred in Michigan selects seed corn in the field before harvesting the main crop. If every farmer field selects, a great increase in corn yield will result.

Seed corn of high vitality can only be secured by drying rapidly immediately after picking and storing in a well ventilated room.

Dependable seed cannot be secured from the crib.

Good seed means a good stand. Planting poor seed results in frequent missing hills. It costs as much to cultivate a poor stand as a good one. It pays to handle seed corn properly.

A little work this fall in field selecting, drying and storing seed corn insures Better germination and a more vigorous start next spring.

More full hills and fewer spaces in the row.

A heavier and richer crop for the silo.

A larger yield of well ripened corn.

Do You Belong?

If you belong to the "Move Forward" bunch here are some little things for you to attend to:

(1) Save and properly cure choice seed corn.

(2) Save enough potatoes from best yielding hills, while digging to plant an acre.

(3) Sow rye wherever possible to be plowed in under next spring.

(4) Build ice house.

(5) Fix over poultry house to be clean, dry, have plenty of light and no lice or mites.

(6) Build simple cement gutter in back of horses and cows to catch many dollars worth of liquid manure that your farm needs.

(7) Make definite plans to get 8 or 10 tons of pulverized limestone along with the other fellows.

WON 1ST PRIZES WITH FOX EXHIBIT

Z. ALVIN GOFF CAPTURES 1ST PREMIUM AT SAGINAW FAIR.

Further honors have come to Crawford county thru the efforts of Z. Alvin Goff who owns and operates a fur farm near Lovells. He made an exhibit of some of his animals at the Saginaw fair and carried away the highest honors for having the finest specimens of male and female silver foxes. He says that there was much competition in this class and feels very happy over his victory. He also won first prizes for the best male skunk and best female mink. His exhibit also won several second prizes and special prizes. A good pair of silver foxes frequently are sold for $2,500.00. Such a price, says Mr. Goff, is extortionate and it is only the uninitiated who are willing to pay it.

His silver foxes are as perfect as can be found anywhere and, he says, can be sold for several hundred dollars less. A pair of foxes each year from three to eight foxes each year which would make a good income even at $1,500 a pair. The pelts are worth about $1,000 each. The Goffs have a pleasant home on Big Creek, 5 miles from Lovells, where their fur farming is being conducted. Mr. Goff is a college bred man and says that he prefers this class of business as it brings greater remuneration than any other line he knows of.

Many motorists have discovered that if they drive along in the middle of the road at high speed, everyone else will get out in the bushes.

Automobiles sell well, while many of the necessities of life go slow. Reason is that automobile dealers usually advertise freely.

The Hamilton Piano

Tested by Briny Ocean Breezes

It is not difficult to make a piano that will hold together and stay in tune so long as it remains on dry land. It is quite another thing to make an instrument that can be shipped abroad and arrive in the same condition as when it left the factory. Damp winds and sudden changes of weather have a way of finding the weak spots.

The export record of the Hamilton Piano is convincing evidence of its thorough dependability. Perhaps no other instrument of American make enjoys so great a demand all over the world. The reason is, it does not have to be rebuilt after an ocean journey.

The Hamilton's ability to stand this grueling test means that it has the durability of construction to give you unending satisfaction in your home. When you buy this House of Baldwin product you know that you are getting an instrument whose design, materials and construction have been proven beyond the slightest doubt. Come in and hear it.

Spoiled Diamonds.
Among the crown jewels of the Hapsburgs were two large diamonds of ruby tint which were always regarded as especially valuable and whenever the royal jewels were placed on exhibition these stones were under special guard. It was necessary some time ago to dispose of the jewels, and as they were being prepared for exhibition, prior to being offered for sale, they were put through a wash which unfortunately removed the color of the precious stones and left them perfectly white. Instead of demanding a fabulous price as ruby diamonds, they were sold simply as white stones.—Chicago Journal.

Seemed to Resent Jap Flag

Oceanic islands have a way of popping up and down now and then. Not many years ago a brand new one made its appearance near the volcano group in the Pacific, and a tumult of the sea and great clouds of ash and steam. When the disturbance had subsided it proved to be nearly three miles in circumference, and the highest part of it was 480 feet above the waves. The Japanese landed on it when it was cool enough, raised their flag upon it, and called it 'Jin Shima.' Whereupon it proceeded to melt like sugar in a teacup, and at last accounts it was only a few feet above sea level.

The Black Wall.

When first I knew my death was at hand I stood facing the black, black wall; sobbing I hammered at it and set teeth and clenched fist attempting to knock it down. To my vain and tired effort it seemed but to increase in gloom and immovability, until my tear-blurred eye perceived intrenched there not only the lawful strength of immovable death, but greediness for its prey, the longing to crush me at once, even before my time. Then I revolted against so much unnecessary cruelty and turned from it in disgust. I vowed that wall should not crush me. And enough to die at my age! While life is mine I mean to live.—From "Words in Pain," anonymous letters of a dying Englishwoman to her physician.

Canada's First Railroad.

The first railroad in Canada was the one built between Lachine and St. John's, Quebec, and opened for traffic in July, 1836. This railway line was established by some prominent Montreal business men, and the railroad was constructed of wooden rails, horsepower being employed during the first year. In 1837 the wooden rails were replaced by iron rails, and the horses by a steam engine. The railway was known as the "Champlain and St. Lawrence Railway company." The Champlain & St. Lawrence Railway company received its charter in 1832—ninety years ago.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

PRAYER CAME FROM HEART

Under the Circumstances, There Can Be Little Doubt Sambo Was Sincere in His Supplication.

Representative Christopherson of South Dakota tells a good story about a dinky who was short of meat at home and selected his pastor's smokehouse as a likely place to get a nice ham. As he was leaving with a big one under his arm the pastor suddenly appeared before him and said:

"Why, Sambo, what are you doing in my smokehouse at this time of night?" To which the trembling dinky replied: "Ah, sah, Ah just come in to pray, sah."

Whereupon the pastor said: "If that is the purpose of this visit here, then you just get down and pray."

Thereupon the dinky sank on his knees, raised his eyes and hands to heaven and offered up this prayer: "Oh, Lord, I pray that you now promptly dismiss us so that we may depart in peace."—Exchange.

Had Nervous Spells

Horatio, Ark.—"I had nervous spells and awful bad feelings. My right side and my back hurt me all the time and I had been going down in health for six or seven years. For three years I had not been able to do my work without help. I weighed only 95 pounds when my husband's mother persuaded me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now I heartily recommend it to all suffering women, as I have gained weight and health. I can do all my work, anything I want to do."—Mrs. JIM REARICK, Horatio, Arkansas.

HAD REAL CAUSE FOR GRIEF

Small Boy's Distress Had a Whole Lot More Than Mere Sympathy as a Basis.

A lad in Washington got a job that didn't at all please him—shoveling the snow from the sidewalk in front of his house. There was a good bit of ground to cover. After about two hours' toil he began to cry.

"What's the matter, son?" asked a sympathetic neighbor as he came upon the scene.

"A tramp came along and stole the shovel from the boy next door," explained the lad between sobs.

"Well, son," continued the neighbor, "it's a fine thing to be sympathetic, but you mustn't worry so over other people's affairs."

"It ain't that," added the boy, "I'm crying because he didn't steal my shovel, too."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

YOU MAY NOT BELIEVE THIS

But, if True, This Young Lady is Very Evidently Not in the Class of Modern "Flappers."

A country correspondent of an Indianapolis weekly newspaper, who disclaimed being either a pessimist or reformer, recently wrote as follows: "The other day a man and his daughter from near Danville, Ky., passed through our town on their way to a nearby village. They expected to be met at the train by a relative, but he was late, so they had to wait for him for four or five hours. The daughter was a young woman of seventeen, but still wore her hair in curls. We were especially impressed by the natural girlishness and sweet modesty of the young woman. She was refined, too, both in manners and dress. Her father apologized for her hair. There's nothing else to say about this little incident except that it is a rare and beautiful thing to hear a father apologize for the modesty of a daughter of seventeen years."—Indianapolis News.

GRAYLING BOARD OF TRADE. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Do You Want Expenses Slashed and Economy Practiced?

The Republican Party presents a record of 18 months of public economy. During that time the United States has made a more drastic reduction in public expenditures than any other nation has made since the armistice. The outstanding features of this Republican program of public economy are:

Reduction of the public debt in the sum of $1,014,068,844.

Reduction of public expenditures in the sum of $1,743,319,789 during the year ended June 30, 1922, as compared with the previous fiscal year, and over $3,- 000,000,000 as compared with the fiscal year ended June 30, 1920—a year during which the Democratic party had control of all the spending agencies of the Government.

Reduction of 79,312 public employees between March 4, 1921, and June 30, 1922.

Reduction of $300,000,000 in public appropriations for routine expenses of government during present year as compared with appropriations for last year.
This is over $1,000,000,000 less than was appropriated to run the Government during the last year of Democratic administration.

Co-operation between the Republican executive departments and the Republican Congress made possible this slashing of public expenses. If this program of public economy, so well begun, is to be carried on it is necessary to elect a Republican Congress in order to continue the cooperation between the executive and legislative branches of the Government.

A REMARKABLE RECORD.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for colds, croup and whooping cough for almost half a century and has constantly grown in favor and popularity as its good qualities became better known. It is the standard and main reliance for these diseases in thousands of homes. The facts that it can always be depended upon and is safe and pleasant to take are greatly in its favor when it is wanted for children.

A GOOD PHYSIC.

When you want a physic that is mild and gentle in effect, easy to take and certain to act take Chamberlain's Tablets. They are excellent.

ANDREW BALHOFF DIED.

A message received Saturday morning by Mrs. P. P. Mahoney bore the sad news of the death of her father, Mr. Andrew Balhoff that occurred that morning at his home in Saginaw. Mr.
and Mrs. Mahoney and children Rose Mary and Thomas left on the afternoon train to be in attendance at the funeral.

Mr. Balhoff had been in very poor health for several years, suffering with tuberculosis of the throat. Since he was first stricken with the disease, while residing in Grayling, each winter he spent in Asheville, North Carolina, where he seemed to get some relief, and on his return home each spring felt greatly improved. But the past couple of years he thought it useless to go south for the winter as he was steadily growing more feeble each day. During his late illness he has been cared for by his wife and daughter Miss Hettys, who is a trained nurse.

The Balhoff family came to Grayling a number of years ago from Bay City and had been residents up to a couple of years ago when they went to Saginaw to make their home.

Mr. Balhoff was long a faithful employee of the M. E. R. Co. as conductor, having to give up his labors owing to his ill health. The family are well and favorably known and their many Grayling friends join with them in their grief over the loss of a good husband and father.

Besides those above mentioned, one son Roy survives, and resides in Saginaw.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS.

Mrs. Charles Austin, Maple St., Grayling, says: "My back caused me trouble and mornings when I got up I felt tired out. It seemed as though my back always ached, especially when I did any stooping or lifting work. I couldn't sleep at all and felt tired and worn out and became depressed. Black spots before my eyes which bothered me greatly in the morning made me dizzy. I had headaches and was so run down I didn't know what to do. I saw how well Doan's Kidney Pills were liked, so I got several boxes at Lewis' Drug Store and after using them I was cured."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that

HOW BETTER THAN PILLS?

The question has been asked in what way are Chamberlain's Tablets superior to the ordinary cathartic and liver pills? Our answer is, they are easier and more pleasant to take and their effect is so gentle that one hardly realizes that it is produced by a medicine. Then they get only move the bowels but improves the appetite and strengthen the digestion.

TO GAIN A GOOD REPUTATION.

The way to gain a good reputation is to endeavor to be what you appear.
This is precisely the manner in which Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has gained its reputation as a cure for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Every bottle that has ever been put out by the manufacturers has been fully up to the high standard of excellence claimed for it. People have found that it can be depend upon for the relief and cure of these ailments and that it is pleasant and safe to take.

Camphor & Hydrastis Fine For Sore Eyes

It is surprising how QUICK eye inflammation is helped by camphor, hy-drastis, witeinazel, etc., as mixed in Lavoptik eye wash. One lady whose eyes were weak and watery for three years was helped BY ONCE. Another case of inflamed eyes was also benefitted. One small bottle Lavoptik usually helps ANY CASE sore, weak or inflamed eyes. Aluminum eye cup

MUDDY COMPLEXION

Feed them RAT-NIP

—and Not a Rat Can Escape

If there are rats about your premises why not let us send you a tube of the new and remarkably effective discovery, Rat-Nip? The great trouble with rat poisons is to get all rats to eat them. Rat-Nip is just as attractive to rats as Catnip is to cats and they all succumb to it, even the wily, old fellows. One or two Rat-Nip feasts and every rat will positively be exterminated from house, store, barn, stable or garage. Not one will remain.

Rat-Nip is safe, easy and clean to handle. It is put up in neat, collapsible, metal tubes and can be readily squeezed out, without coming in contact with the hands or anything else. One tube goes a long way. Price 30 cents.

Come in and look over our line of goods. We hope to have the pleasure of seeing you soon.

FARRELL

SYNOPSIS.—At Thornton Fairchild's death his son Robert learns there has been a dark period in his father's life which proved thirty years has caused him suffering. The secret is hinted at in a document left by the father, Fairchild, which also informs Robert he is now owner of a mining claim in Colorado, and advising him to see Henry Beamish, a lawyer. Beamish tells Robert his claim, a silver mine, is at Ohadi, thirty-eight miles from Denver. He also warns him against a certain man, "Squint" Rodaine, his father's enemy. Robert decides to go to Ohadi. On the road to Ohadi from Denver Fairchild assists a girl apparently in a frenzy of hate, to change a tire on her auto. When she has left, the sheriff and a posse appear, bewildered, misleads them as to the direction the girl had taken. At Ohadi Fairchild is warmly greeted by "Mother" Howard, a boarding-house keeper, for his father's sake. From Mother Howard Fairchild learns something of the mystery connected with the disappearance of "Squint" Rodaine, his father's co-worker in the mine. He meets the girl he had assisted, but she denies her identity. She is Anita Richmond, Judge Richmond's daughter. Visiting his claim, Fairchild is shadowed by a man who recognizes him from descriptions as "Squint" Rodaine. Back in Ohadi, his father's old friend, Harry Harkins, a Cornishman, summons him from England by Beamish to help Fairchild, but he has with him. The pair find the mine flooded and have not sufficient funds to have it pumped dry. Later in the day "Squint" Rodaine announces that he practically saw Harkins fall into the flooded mine, and eventually is drowned. Harkins being a general favorite, the entire population turns out to clear the flooded mine. "Squint" Rodaine is practically done. Harry appears. It had been a show trick, and the men take it as a good joke. Fairchild learns that Judge Richmond is dying, and that he and Anita are in the power of the Rodaines. They begin, as partners, to work the mine. In the meantime both Harry Harkins and his body buried by a cave-in which destroyed the mine. At the "Old Times Ball" Fairchild dances with Anita, to the discomfiture of Maurice Rodaine, son of "Squint," supposed to be the father of the girl. A band plays up the dance and shoots a merry-maker. Maurice Rodaine claims he recognized the band as Harkins. The latter is arrested. Fairchild is forced to leave Anita and her father's mine. He is met at Anita's apparent indignation.

CHAPTER X

The Rodaines were on the sidewalk when Fairchild came forth from the Richmond home, and true to his instructions from the frightened girl, he brushed past them swiftly and went on down the street, not turning at the rustled invitations which came from the closed lips of the older man, not seeming even to notice their presence as he hurried on toward Mother Howard's boarding house. In his creaky old he sought to think, but in vain.

After hours, daylight began to streak the sky. Fairchild, dull, worn by excitement and fatigue, strove to rise, then laid his head on the pillow for just a moment of rest. And with that perversion which extreme weariness so often exerts, his eyes closed, and he slept to wake at last with the realization that it was late morning, and that some one was pounding on the door. Fairchild raised his head.

"Who is it?"

"No one you know—yet. I've come to talk to you about your partner. May I come in?"

"Yes," Fairchild was fully alive now to the activities that the day held before him. The door opened, and a young man, alert, almost cocky in manner, with black, snappy eyes showing behind horn-rimmed glasses, entered and reached for the sole chair that the room contained.

"My name's Farrell," he announced. "Randolph P. Farrell. And to make a long story short, I'm your lawyer."

"My lawyer?" Fairchild stared. "I haven't any lawyer in Ohadi. The only—"

"That doesn't alter the fact, I'm your lawyer, and I'm at your service. And I don't mind telling you that it's just about my first case. Otherwise I don't guess I'd have gotten it."

"Why not?" The frankness had driven other queries from Fairchild's mind. Farrell, the attorney, grinned cheerily.

"Because I understand it concerns the Rodaines. Nearly everybody has a little money stuck into their enterprises. And seeing I have no money at all, I'm not financially interested. And I'm not interested, I'm wholly just, fair and willing to fight 'em to a standstill. Your partner's in jail, as I understand it. Guilty or not guilty?"

"Wa—wait a minute! Who hired you?" Then with a sudden inspiration: "Mother Howard didn't go and do this?"

"Mother Howard? You mean the woman who runs the boarding house? Not at all."

"But—"

"I'm not exactly at liberty to state. Suspicion began to assert itself."

"Under those conditions, I don't believe—"

"Don't say it! Don't get started along those lines. I know what you're thinking. Knew that was what would happen from the start. And against the wishes of the person who hired me for this work, I—well, I brought the evidence. Here, take a glimpse and then throw it away, tear it up, swallow it, or do anything you want to with it, just so nobody else sees it. Ready? Look!"

He drew forth a small visiting card. Fairchild glanced. Then he looked, and then he sat up straight in bed. For before him were the engraved words:

"Miss Anita Natalie Richmond." While across the card was hastily written, in a hand distinctively feminine:

"Mr. Fairchild: This is my good friend. He will help you. There is no fee attached. Please destroy." "Anita Richmond."

"But—but I don't understand."

"You know Miss—er—the writer of this card, don't you?"

"But why should she—?"

Mr. Farrell grinned broadly. "I see you don't know Miss—the writer of this card at all. That's her name. Besides—well, all she's got to do with me is crook her finger and I'll jump through. I'm—none of your business. But, anyway, here I am."

Fairchild could not restrain a laugh. There was something about the man, about his nervous, yet boyish way of speaking, about his enthusiasm, that wiped out suspicion and invited confidence. The owner of the Blue Poppy mine leaned forward.

"But you didn't finish your sentence about—the writer of that card."

"You mean—oh—well, there's nothing to that. I'm in love with her. Been in love with her since I've been knee-high to a duck. So 're you. So every other human being that thinks he's a regular man. So's Maurice Rodaine. Don't know about the rest of you—but I haven't got a chance. Don't let it bother you. The problem right now is to get your partner out of jail. How much money have you got?"

"Only a little more than two thousand."

"Not enough. There'll be bonds on four charges. At the least, they'll be around a thousand dollars apiece. Probabilities are that they'll run around ten thousand for the bunch. How about the Blue Poppy?"

"I don't know what it's worth."

"Neither do I. Neither does the judge. Neither does any one else. Therefore, it's worth at least ten thousand dollars. That'll do the trick. I'll suggest now that you get up, seize your deeds and accompany me to the palace of justice. Otherwise, that partner of yours will have to eat dinner in a place called in undignified language the 'house-guest.'"

Soon Fairchild was dressed and walked hurriedly up the street with the voluble attorney. A half-hour more and they were before the court.

Fairchild, the lawyer and the jail-woman Harry, his mustache fluttering in more directions than ever.

"Not guilty, Your Honor," said Randolph P. Farrell. "May I ask the extent of the bond?"

The judge adjusted his glasses and studied the information which the district attorney had laid before him.

"In view of the number of charges and the seriousness of each, I must fix an aggregate bond of five thousand dollars, or twelve hundred fifty dollars for each case."

"Thank you; we had come prepared for more. Mr. Fairchild, who is Mr. Harkins' partner, is here to appear as bondsman. The deeds are in his name alone, the partnership existing, as I understand it, upon their word of honor or between them. I refer, Your Honor, to the deeds of the Blue Poppy mine. Would Your Honor care to examine them?"

His Honor would. His Honor did. For a long moment he studied them, and Fairchild, in looking about the courtroom, saw the baffled in conversation.

"Drop in any day this week and we'll go over things," he announced cheerfully. "We put one over on our royal jobs that time, anyway. Hates me from the ground up. Worst we can hope for is a conviction and then a Supreme court reversal. I'll get him so mad he'll fill the case with errors. He used to be an instructor down at Boulder, and I stuck the pages of a lecture together on his one day. That's why I asked for an early trial. Know he'd give me a late one. That'll let us have time to stir up a little favorable evidence, which right now we don't possess. Understand—all money that comes from the mine is held in escrow until this case is decided. But I'll explain that. Going to stick around here and bask in the effulgence of really possessing a case. Strong!"

And he turned back into the courtroom, while Fairchild, the dazed Harry staking beside him, started down the street.

"Ow do you figure it?" asked the Cornishman at last.

"What?"

"Rodaine. 'E helped us out!"

Fairchild stopped. It had not occurred to him before. But now he saw it; that if Rodaine, as an expert on mining, had condemned the Blue Poppy, it could have meant only one thing, the denial of bond by the judge and the lack of freedom for Harry. Fairchild rubbed a hand across his brow.

"I can't figure it," came at last. "And especially since his son is the accuser and since I got the best of them both last night!"

"Got the best of 'em? You?"

The story was brief in its telling. And it brought no explanation of the sudden amiability displayed by the crooked-faced Rodaine. They went on, striving vainly for a reason, at last to stop in front of the post office, as the postmaster leaned out of the door.

"Your name's Fairchild, isn't it?" asked the person of letters.

"Yes."

"Thought so. Some of the fellows said you were. There's been a letter for you here for two days."

"For me?" Vaguely Fairchild went within and received the missive, a plain, bond envelope without a return address. He turned it over and over in his hand before he opened it—then looked at the postmark—Denver. At last:

"Open it, why don't you?"

Harry's mustache was tickling his ear, as the big miner stared over his shoulder. Before them were figures and sentences which blurred for a moment, finally to resolve into:

"Mr. Robert Fairchild, Ohadi, Colorado."

"Dear Sir:

"I am empowered by a client whose name I am not at liberty to state, to make you an offer of $50,000 for your property in Clear Creek county, known as the Blue Poppy mine. In reply, kindly address your letter to:

"Box 180, Denver, Colo."

Harry whistled long and thoughtfully.

"That's a 'ole lot of money!"

"An awful lot, Harry. But why was the offer made? There's nothing to base it on, there's—"

Then for a moment, as they stepped out of the post office, he gave up the thought, even of comparative riches. Twenty feet away, a man and a girl were approaching, talking as though there never had been the slightest trouble between them. It was Maurice Rodaine and Anita Richmond; they came closer, her eyes turned toward Fairchild, and then—

She went on, without speaking, without taking the trouble to notice, apparently, that he had been standing there.

After this, there was little conversation until Harry and Fairchild had reached the boarding house. Then, with Mother Howard for an adviser, the three gathered in the old parlor, and Fairchild related the events of the night before, adding what had happened at the post office, when Anita had passed him without speaking. Mother Howard, her arms folded as usual, bobbed her gray head.

"It's like her, Son," she announced at last. "She's a good girl. I've known her ever since she was a little but not big enough to walk. And she loves her father."

"But—"

"She loves her father. Isn't that enough? The Rodaines have the money—and they have almost everything that Judge Richmond owns. It's easy enough to guess what they've done with it—led it up so that he can't touch it until they're ready for him to do it. And they're not going to do that until they've gotten what they want."

"Which is—?"

"Anita! Any fool ought to be able to know that. That stroke last night was the second one for the Judge. There usually isn't any more after the third one. Now, can't you see why Anita is willing to do anything on earth just to keep peace and just to give her father a little rest and comfort and happiness in the last days of his life? You've got to remember that he ain't like an ordinary father that you can go to and tell all your troubles to. He's laying next door to death, and Anita, just like any woman that's got a great, big, good heart in her, is willing to face worse than death to help him. It's as plain to me as the nose on Harry's face."

"Which is quite plain," agreed Fairchild ruefully. Harry rubbed the it-behind-proboscis, puffed at his mustache and fidgeted in his chair.

"I understand that, all right," he announced at last. "But why should anybody want to buy the mine?"

It brought Fairchild to the realization

tion of a new development, and he brought forth the letter, once more to stare at it. "Fifty thousand dollars is a lot of money," came at last.

"And what then?" Mother Howard, still looking through uncolored glasses, took the letter and scanned it. "You two ain't gutters, are you?"

"Oo, oo!" Harry bawled.

"Yes, you. If you are, get yourselves a piece of paper and write to Denver and take the offer. If you ain't—keep on fighting."

"I believe you're right, Mother Howard," Fairchild had reached for the letter again and was staring at it as though for inspiration. "That amount of money seems to be a great deal. Still, if a person will offer that much for a mine when there's nothing in sight to show its value, it ought to mean that there's something dark in the woodpile and that the thing's worth fighting out. And personally speaking, I'm willing to fight!"

"I never quit in my life!" Harry straightened in his chair and his mustache stuck forth pugnaclously. Mother Howard looked down at him, pressed her lips, then smiled.

"No," she announced, "except to run away like a whipped pup after you'd gotten a poor lonely boarding-house keeper in love with you!"

"Mother Howard, I'll—"

But the laughing, gray-haired woman had scrambled through the doorway and slammed the door behind her, only to open it a second later and poke her head within.

"Needn't think because you can hold up a dance hall and get away with it, you can use cave-man stuff on me!" she admonished. And in that one sentence

Five men were with him, to help him carry in ropes, heavy pulleys, weights and a large metal shaft. He took them and trundle away with them, leaving the larger one and the larger engine for a single load. At last Harry turned to his paraphernalia and rolled up his sleeves.

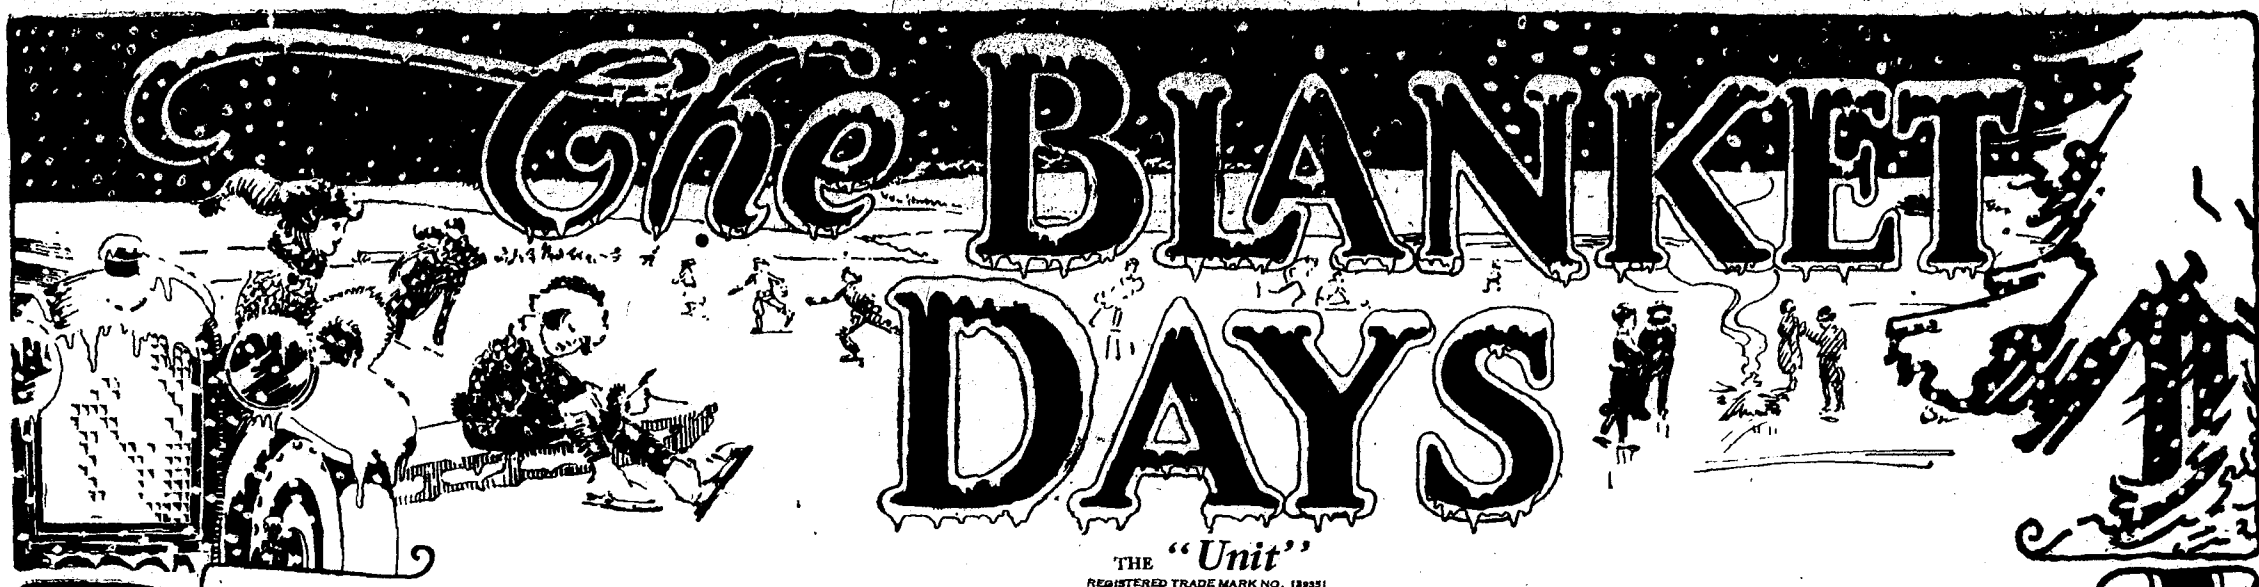

"Ere's where we work!" he announced. "It's us for a pulley and bucket arrangement until we can get the 'ole to working and the skip to running. 'Elp me 'ave a few timbers."

It was the beginning of a three-days' job, the building of a heavy staging over the top of the shaft, the affixing of the great pulley and then the attachment of the bucket at one end, and the skip, loaded with pig iron, on the other. Altogether, it formed a sort of crude, counterbalanced elevator, by which they might lower themselves into the shaft, with various bumpings and delays—but which worked successfully, nevertheless. Together they pulled into the big, iron bucket, Harry lugging along spikes and timbers and sledges and ropes. Then, pulling away at the cable which held the weights, they furnished the necessary gravity to travel downward.

An eerie journey, faced on one side by the crawling rope of the skip as it traveled along the rusty old track on its water-soaked ties, on the other by the still dripping timbers of the aged shaft and its broken, rotting ladder, while the carbide lanterns cast shadows about, while the pulley above creaked and the eroded wheels of the skip squeaked and protested! Downward—a hundred feet—and they collided with the upward-bound skip, to fend off from it and start on again. The air grew colder, more moist. The carbides spluttered and fared.

A slight bump, and they were at the bottom. Before them the drift tunnel, damp and dripping and dark, awaited, seeming to throw back the glare of the carbides as though to shield the treasures which might lie beyond. Harry started forward a step, then pausing, shifted his carbide and laid a hand on his companion's shoulder.

"Boy," he said slowly, "we're starting at something new—and I don't know where it's going to lead us. There's a cave-in up 'ere, and if we're ever going to get anywhere in this mine, we'll 'ave to go past it. And I'm afraid of what we're going to find when we cut our way through."
